

There is a strong probability that the case of Clifford the murderer of Captain Pugh, will not be heard at the present term of the supreme court.

There were 18,007 votes cast in Milwaukee county for William Pitt Lyon for associate justice of the supreme court, and Miss Kate Kane received 3 votes. So Kate has two admirers besides herself.

The report has been widely circulated that President Arthur thought seriously of appointing General Fairchild postmaster general, and probably would have done so had the Wisconsin delegation in congress urged his appointment. The editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel says he has the best authority for the statement that the gossip concerning the appointment of General Fairchild is absolutely without foundation. He also says: "One of the senators of this state had a conversation with Secretary Frelinghuysen on the subject of General Fairchild's appointment, and was informed that the absence of the latter in Europe precluded his being considered as a candidate. The person appointed, Mr. Frelinghuysen said, must be ready to take possession of the office in a few days."

There are a few persons in Wisconsin who desired that Governor Rusk should appoint an "arbor day" after the fashion of that in Michigan and Kansas. But a newspaper correspondent called on the governor the other day when the latter said in pretty emphatic language—"I shall not issue a tree-planting proclamation, for it seems to me that if I did, it would be crowding the mourners. We have had proclamations until I am tired of them. I notice that the governors who have formally announced an 'Arbor Day' are directed by their various legislatures so to do and have no option in regard to the matter. To be sure, the case of Nebraska is an exception, but I am governor of that state I should be tempted to call for tree planting about once a month, because of the severity of the climate, but Wisconsin has no such want as Nebraska."

Anybody who has any recollection of the war times, has not forgotten Henry Clay Dean, who 23 years ago lived in Iowa. He was a Methodist preacher and a stump orator, and possessed wonderful power over the masses by his dashing eloquence. When he rose before solid acres of men and women during the war to speak to them against the war and to slander Lincoln and insult every man engaged in fighting treason, it seemed as if his hearers thought he was preaching a gospel they were bound to heed. He swayed the vast multitude he addressed with astonishing ease, especially if they were largely composed of democrats who sympathized with the rebellion. Henry Clay Dean in his dirty shirt sleeves with his pants tied about his waist, was a potent evil in those days, and hanging would hardly have been too severe for him. He is 60 years old now and lives in Missouri. He is in good health, but as age whitens his locks and bends his form and he turns his face toward the setting sun and trends the downward side of life he is admonished that he made a grave mistake in denouncing Lincoln and the proclamation of freedom, and hurling vulgar epithets at those who were fighting to save the country. He has lost all his bitterness. He is a thorough christian now, but wasn't then, and reports say he is doing much good by his lectures on christianity.

NEAL DOW ON CRIME IN MAINE.

During the past winter there have been several statements published in the papers in all parts of the country in regard to crimes in Maine, the statements purporting to show that there were as many capital offenses committed in that state under prohibition, as there were crimes in states where prohibition did not exist. These statements met the eye of that veteran prohibitionist, General Neal Dow of Maine, and at once he proceeded to answer some of them. He wrote to the Madison Democrat and the Milwaukee Sentinel giving each some statistics of crime in eight states to show that in proportion to the population, there were less capital crimes committed in Maine than in any of the eight states named. Here are the general figures:

STATES	Capital Crimes
Alabama	873, out to 1,400
California	1,518, out to 60
Connecticut	278, out to 1,000
Maine	291, out to 3,300
Massachusetts	767, out to 2,300
New York	3,488, out to 1,400
New Hampshire	193, out to 1,000
Vermont	178, out to 1,300

General Dow is very sensitive in regard to newspaper attacks on the result of prohibition in Maine, and well he may be, for he is the father of the Maine law, and has cherished and defended it as a father would cherish and defend his own child, and he can see no fault in it. He therefore calls all statements which show that there are as many capital crimes in Maine as in other states, lies, and produces figures which purport to bear him out in his position.

But the Madison Democrat takes a position which tends to show that General Dow publishes false statements himself. He says that Maine shows the smallest proportion of convicts of any of the eight states, being one to every 3,200 inhabitants. The Democrat makes answer that the general is very wide of the mark, as by the census of 1880, Maine had 648,936 inhabitants. The number of 291 convicts show a proportion of one to every 2,280, and about the same in Massachusetts where prohibition does not exist. The Democrat then says: "But out here in Wisconsin we can beat those statistics all hollow. Our population in 1880 was 1,315,498. Our number of convicts was at the end of last year 345, or one to every 3,781 inhabitants. Our actual population now is fully a million and a half, which would make our showing still better, or one convict to every 3,410. This makes Maine's showing, upon that line of statistics, nearly twice as bad as Wisconsin's. These figures are given merely to illustrate the fallacy of proving propositions of the kind sought to be established by these statistics."

These facts show that Neal Dow can twist figures as skillfully as any man in this country. He can make them answer his purpose at any time they are demanded.

HORRORS.

Caving of a Mine in the Lake Superior Region.

Seven Men Buried Alive—Incendiary Fire in Maryland.

The Charred Bodies of Two Men Found in the Ruins—A Terrible Time at Sea—Other Casualties.

ESCANABA, Mich., April 11.—The hanging wall of the Keokuk mine, which is situated two miles west of Quinnesec, caved into the mine at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A space of ground seventy-five feet long by fifty feet wide went down, carrying the power-house and machinery and the following men: P. Egan, D. Williams, W. Henderson, J. Morris, G. James, E. Wick, W. Jeffrey, W. Polard. Wick was rescued, but is probably fatally injured. His ribs and one thigh were broken. There were no men in the mine at the time of the accident. The work of rescue is being prosecuted vigorously, but the unfortunate men are probably dead.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

NORWAY, Mich., April 11.—The most disastrous mine accident recorded in the history of the Lake Superior mines occurred at the Keokuk mine, Monmouth range, in the Michigan iron district, at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At the hour named about ninety feet of ground between the main engine-house and No. 1 shaft caved in, the engine-house, in which were eight men, and containing all the mine machinery and four large boilers, going down a distance of from 100 to 200 feet. All the men were killed outright except Ed. Wick, who went down alive, but remained on top of the debris, with his leg broken at the thigh and one rib broken near the heart, until rescued. His recovery is doubtful. A pump and boiler must be put in operation, but the work will take a week or more. The mine was about to be abandoned, as the surface was about to sink, and the steam-pipes out of the shaft when the accident occurred. The names of the killed, as near as can be ascertained, are: P. Egan, William Morris, Richard Williams, and William Jeffrey. Thomas James, W. Henderson.

CHARRED CORPSES.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 11.—What is believed to be the work of incendiaries caused the destruction of more than a block of houses and business establishments in Winchester, Md., yesterday morning, a total loss of $150,000, and involved the horrible death of two young men who perished in the flames. All that remained of bones and baked flesh. There seems to have been a determined scheme to burn the town. The first incendiary attempt was made Monday morning, when the leading hotel was found to be on fire, but the flames were soon extinguished. About midnight a fire was discovered in Thompson's (livery stable, and on account of the judgment character of the premises—being filled with straw and hay—burned with great rapidity and communicated to the large building occupied by Dixie & Scott, boat and shoe dealers, and J. M. Wells, paper dealer. There were thirty horses in the livery stable, all of which perished. Robert Thompson and Aaron Sharf, who were sleeping in the building, were unable to escape, and their charred corpses were found among the ruins. The men engaged in the destruction of the buildings were known as the Zeiler building, the flames were in a position to baffle the exertions of the firemen, and at once took in the adjacent buildings. The Zeiler building, the Thompson building, Mr. Thompson's house, Jacob Leister's dwelling, with the coach factory adjoining, Mrs. Maloney's millinery establishment, Mr. Erb's house, the Latham carriage and harness shop, and other property.

A later dispatch from Westminster says: A vigilance committee is forming secretly to make an attack upon the jail, which the prisoners are to be taken to, and the committee is strongly urged, to Justice Crapier's office and committed for a hearing to-day. As the excitement is so great, they had to be conveyed back to jail secretly.

ACVCLONE AT SEA.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 11.—The steamer Nothing Hill, from New York April 1 for London, put in here after terrible experience at sea. The Tuesday evening after sailing a gale began, which raged throughout the night, becoming a cyclone Wednesday morning when the ship was thrown on her beam ends. For two days following the hurricane prevailed, the mizen-boom being torn away and dashed against the skylight of the engine room, through which the boom and gale, seriously injuring three engineers. All the doors of the deck-houses were burst, the masts were blown down, and a great quantity of the ship's provisions carried away. Thirty-three feet of solid steel bulkheads were swept into the sea, and thirty feet more damaged. The ship was then torn from the fastenings and was being scuttled. Multitudes of seas drowned the fire and threatened to overwhelm the ship. For forty-eight hours the ship was on her beam ends, and the pump was kept going, but was only able to keep the water from gaining. The live stock in the hold were swimming about this time and having no food, they were thrown overboard. The ship was then taken in tow by Capt. Bennett and demanded to be taken into port or have the ship abandoned. To comply with the demand was impossible, the water in the engine room was in the fire, and the pump was broken. The ship being taken in tow, the water was quickly reduced, and the ship was taken in tow and under way she righted. An examination showed thirty-four bullocks and six sheep lost, 134 head of cattle and 130 sheep on board. The remainder of the cargo is in good order, except about 100 tons washed overboard. The cattle and sheep will likely be sold here and the ship repaired damages.

TEWESBURY.

Benjamin, the Butler, Making out a Strong Case Against the Other House Officers.

BOSTON, Mass., April 11.—Governor Butler was present at the Tewesbury Almshouse investigation yesterday. Joseph A. Chase testified that he had worked for Miss Manning and with her knowledge had taken bottles to the Harvard Medical school by order of the Marshes. The governor then introduced a sermon by a Mr. Sanborn, a minister of Lawrence, in which it was stated that Spaulding, one of the trustees of the almshouse, had boasted that while no emolument was attached to the trusteeship he could make it pay. The governor intimated that this was done by turning over contracts to outside parties with whom Spaulding divided the profits. The governor then offered a printed testimonial to the character of Sanborn, which, after some discussion, was admitted.

John H. Chase said that since his first testimony he had gone to Tewesbury with a detective and searched a coffin supposed to contain the body of Joseph Chase. The body had previously been sold, and the coffin, which was empty, was brought to Boston. There were other coffins in the same condition and a detection of a plot to bury the body of Chase in a coffin of his mother's grave, which he refused to do. But Chase said he ought to have taken it. The body was afterwards sent to the almshouse and the coffin supplied by some ladies to put the body into had been kept and sold by Chase, a wooden case taking its place.

Detective James corroborated Chase's testimony as to taking up Chase's coffin, and the governor said he would bring before the committee, but the chairman said the committee preferred to go and look at it. Adjourned until to-day.

—The members of Crystal Temple of Honor and their families, held one of their pleasant social gatherings in their lodge hall last evening. The social was well attended, and all spent an enjoyable and pleasant evening, notwithstanding the bad weather and high wind storm which prevailed at the time.

—Mr. James Galbraith has sold another of his famous Clydesdale horses to Messrs. Gifford & Caboon, of Michigan, realizing therefor $1,600. Mr. Caboon was in the city to-day and made the purchase. He is an excellent judge of horses, and concluded that he could do no better than to try the Clydesdale at that price.

—It is said by some that the action of the common council, on Monday night, in accepting the resignation of Mr. Sheldon as school commissioner for the fourth ward, and the election of Mr. Atwood, was "a little too previous"; that the resignation should first be acted upon by the board of education.

—The Madison Journal of last evening has the following item in relation to the Clifford case:—"The motion to dismiss the case of Hartley Clifford, who shot and killed Captain Pugh at Racine, several months ago, from the supreme court, was not argued to-day, owing to the non-appearance of the attorneys. The date for argument will now have to be agreed upon by the attorneys."

—Mr. D. S. Glasco, of Arizona, was at the Grand hotel to-day, on his way to Monroe to visit a brother. Mr. Glasco formerly lived in Janesville, and was for some time a clerk in the McKee establishment. Fourteen years ago he left this city and started for the territories, and since that time has pretty much kept himself on the confines of civilization. He has been in Arizona four or five years, and will return to Tucson in the course of a week.

—Mr. John Galbraith returned from his Dakota trip this morning. He reports that the rush to that territory is one of the surprising things of the time. The passenger train on which he returned was side-tracked half a dozen times in one day to allow trains to pass loaded with immigrants and farming implements. He thinks he will not establish a business in Dakota at present, very wisely preferring to wait until the excitement is over and the rush subsides. The condition of affairs will then determine whether it will pay to enter into business in Dakota.

The Weather.

REPORTED BY FRETTE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.

At seven o'clock this morning the thermometer registered 33 degrees above zero. Clear with a strong north wind. At one p. m. the register stood at 55 degrees above zero. Partly cloudy—wind fresh from the northwest. For the same hours one year ago the register stood at 25 and 34 degrees above zero.

"Fire Him Out."

This is a common remark when rough and rowdy insult public decency by their unseemly ways. Dyspepsia is a horrid bore. Fire it out with Burdock Blood Bitters. You can do it.

The Burlington Survey.

The surveyors of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway entered the city to-day, and surveyed a line through River street. The appearance of these men created no little excitement in the city, especially when the looker-on saw that a railroad was to be built through the very heart of the city. Crowds soon began to assemble and discuss the situation with manifest feeling. An indignation meeting was suggested, damages to property were estimated, and general condemnation of the course of the Burlington folks, was expressed on all hands. The men engaged in surveying the line were asked numerous questions, but not a satisfactory answer was made to any one of them.

If any one wants to throw away his time he should attempt to interview Mr. Ballard or any of his men in regard to the proposed plans of the Burlington & Quincy in building the so-called route from Rockford to Madison by the way of Janesville. The more he attempts to pry into the secrets of the company, the more he will find himself crushed. The survey of the line through the city is as harmless as an April shower. The Burlington folks will never run their line up River street, and it may be that they will never build it through any part of this city. This preliminary survey is no certainly that Janesville will soon have another railway. We need it, and hope to get it, but at present the outlook keeps the people in doubt about it.

Municipal Court.

In the municipal court to-day William Artes was tried on a charge of assault and battery, found guilty and fined $10 and costs amounting to $7.48.

This afternoon the same individual and John Kirk were before the court on a charge of disturbing the peace on Sunday, March 25th. Artes and Kirk took advantage of the absence of the police force from the city, and engaged in a fight at Monterey, and to-day they both pleaded guilty, and were each fined fifteen dollars and costs, $2.45, making the bill for each to settle $17.45.

Joined Together.

The marriage of Mr. La Monte B. Rich, of Oshkosh, and Miss Lottie Capelle, of this city, took place at six o'clock last evening at the home of the bride's parents in the first ward. The Rev. Oim A. Curtis, of Court Street Methodist church, performed the ceremony. The marriage service was followed by a shower of congratulations, and a beautiful wedding supper. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Thomas Capelle, conductor on the Northwestern road. The newly married couple will make their home at Oshkosh.
